As a fellow class of 83 graduate, my sympathy and prayers go out to family and friends of Andy

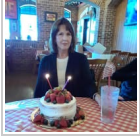

John Leece - April 22, 2017 at 12:32 PM

We just found out about Andy's passing. Tried calling and his number was disconnected. That caused us concern so we started checking. We were so shocked and are terribly sad we missed his service so we could show our respect. Andy did a lot of work for us throughout the years. He was always very pleasant and wanted us to be completely satisfied. We send our condolences to his family and are greiving ourselves. God Bless!

“ I have known Andy since 2010, when he installed some windows at my house. I was so blessed to have had him do them, as I never doubted that whatever he did - he did with the pride of a third generation carpenter and with attention to detail increasingly lost in a Millennial world. I knew he was THE man, when he told his then partner that they has to take the doorwall back out and reinstall it. I could see not a single thing wrong with it, so I asked what was wrong with the way it was. His replay - its off an eighth inch. Perfection. He did another dozen or so projects for me over the next seven years, many with his current partner Ron, and it was always top shelf. I never hesitated to recommend him to others, as I know he would do right.

In addition to his great carpenter skills, I grew to know him as a friend. He had a quick wit, generous spirit, and goodly laugh. Many were the mornings when we mourned the Tigers loss from the night before. Or commiserated on some knucklehead political thing that had occurred. The world needs more Andys and I will surely miss him.

I will never forget my Friend Andy. He looked out for me in elementary school like he was my big brother. All through school we had that special bond. As we grew to adults not seeing each other as much turned into brother hood. I am truly sorry I live in Florida and can't pay my tribute to a great man who I will truly miss in person. Till we meet again my Big Brother ❤️❤️🙏🇺🇸🥲🥲🥲

“ Oh I have alot of memories with Andy! Being one of my dad's best friends, i grew up as Andy like my uncle. My most favorite memories are how close him and ronnie (my husband) and him got over the last 4 years working together. Andy poured his heart into his construction business and he taught Ronnie alot of things!! We love you Andy and are going to miss you a ton! Xoxo
