“ My favorite memory of Grandma is so hard to choose. I have so many wonderful ones. I'd say one of my favorite had to be circa 1980ish. I was about 4 years old. I remember it as if it were yesterday. It was before Grandpa's stroke. Grandma woke me, with the vigor and bubbiness of a schoolgirl. I remember the feeling of my hand in hers, as she led me into the kitchen at the house on Janice Drive. There, waiting with equal exuberance, was Grandpa. He stood proudly behind a large ceramic Strawberry Shortcake lamp, sitting on the kitchen table. It was a lamp that they had painstakingly painted for me, knowing that I would love it. Granted, over the years, the top heavy lamp tipped over and broke beyond repair. But, to this day, the memory of that huge Strawberry Shortcake lamp and the bright look in my grandparents eyes is burned in my heart forever. RIP Grandma. I love you forever. Give grandpa a big hug from his Honey Bun.
