“ I have indelible and very fond memories of Ron from our days playing football, attending school, and having fun on our senior trip. I remember when Ron's grandfather died that Ron helped take care of his grandfather's cows every morning early. The cows contracted what Ron called "dysentery." Ron's main complaint about that was that, on Sunday mornings, he did not have time to return home to change his clothes before church, and he noticed that people seemed to think he smelled. Most of all I remember how solid, honest, warm and direct Ron was. What a wonderful friend. It was great to know him.

Knowing Ronald a little in high school over 50 years ago was a pleasure. Missing someone does get easier because even though it's one day further from the last time we talked with him, it's one day closer to the next time we will. May Blessing be with you all.
